

This exhibition is called Nature: Sensory. It features art made by Amelia Baron, Jessie Davies, Michelle Duxbury, Sam Metz and Helen Thomas.

The exhibition explores the theme of nature and how we experience it.

The artists visited or thought about Wakefield's green spaces like parks and woodlands to help them make their work.

They want you to think about how we sense nature. How does it make us feel? What can we smell, touch or hear?

All the artists have a disability or long term health problem. This enables them to experience nature through a unique perspective.